Breast Phase III A Study Evaluating the Efficacy and Safety of Inavolisib + Palbociclib + Fulvestrant vs Placebo + Palbociclib + Fulvestrant in Patients With PIK3CA-Mutant, Hormone Receptor-Positive, Her2-Negative, Locally Advanced or Metastatic Breast Cancer NCT04191499 Phase I To Evaluate the Safety, Tolerability, and Pharmacokinetics of Inavolisib Single Agent in Participants With Solid Tumors and in Combination With Endocrine and Targeted Therapies in Participants With Breast Cancer NCT03006172 A number of clinical and preclinical programs are in development featuring our tetravalent bispecific ICE® (innate cell engager) molecules based on the ROCK® (Redirected Optimized Cell Killing) platform, and have already shown a favorable safety profile and promising signs of therapeutic efficacy. AFM13 is a first-in-class ICE® (innate cell engager) molecule that has the potential to deliver clinically meaningful benefits to patients with CD30+ lymphomas.1 AFM24 is an EGFR-binding ICE® (innate cell engager) molecule that kills EGFR-expressing tumors, and through ADCC and ADPC, holds promise to treat all patient subtypes with a more acceptable safety profile compared with current advanced treatments, while remaining immune to the challenge of resistance.2 Expanding our pipeline are AFM28, Roivant-partnered AFM32, a Genentech-partnered ICE® (innate cell engager) molecule, and several ICE® (innate cell engager) + NK-cell combinations—all at the pre-IND stage. As pioneers in cancer innovation, our mission is to drive discovery and progress to bring significant clinical advances in the fight against cancer. For years, we have led the way in understanding and advancing the fields of cancer biology, immunology, and drug development. Through our strong commitment and partnerships with clinical researchers, oncologists, pathologists, patients, and more, we aspire to drive a more personalized approach to healthcare using advanced data and technology to identify the right treatment approach for the right patient. With a diverse pipeline of investigational molecules in more than 100 ongoing clinical trials and our ongoing pursuit of scientific discoveries, we will continue to break through the barriers and complexities in oncology to improve the lives of people with cancer. LUCENTIS is contraindicated in patients with ocular or periorcular infections or known hypersensitivity to ranibizumab or any of the excipients in LUCENTIS. Hypersensitivity reactions may manifest as severe intraocular inflammation. Warnings and Precautions Intravitreal Injections, including those with LUCENTIS, have been associated with endophthalmitis, retinal detachment, and iatrogenic traumatic cataract. Proper aseptic injection technique should always be utilized when administering LUCENTIS. Patients should be monitored following the injection to permit early treatment, should an infection occur. Increases in intraocular pressure (IOP) have been noted both pre-injection and post-injection (at 60 minutes) with LUCENTIS. Monitor intraocular pressure prior to and following intravitreal injection with LUCENTIS and manage appropriately. Although there was a low rate of arterial thromboembolic events (ATEs) observed in the LUCENTIS clinical trials, there is a potential risk of ATEs following intravitreal use of VEGF inhibitors. ATEs are defined as nonfatal stroke, nonfatal myocardial infarction, or vascular death (including deaths of unknown cause). Fatal events occurred more frequently in patients with DME and DR at baseline treated monthly with LUCENTIS compared with control. Although the rate of fatal events was low and included causes of death typical of patients with advanced diabetic complications, a potential relationship between these events and intravitreal use of VEGF inhibitors cannot be excluded. Adverse Events Serious adverse events related to the injection procedure that occurred in
